To whom it may concern,

Until recently, Donald (Don) Milligan has worked for our company as a general IT contractor. I have found him to be consistently pleasant and eager to tackle any assignment.

Over the past 2 years, Don has worked on a wide range of technical projects. They required him to utilize and expand his skills in technical writing and documentation, Linux development, system administration, network security, and physical system installations. He was never afraid to jump in and learn on his feet. He took special interest in security from both software and network perspectives, researching the area thoroughly on his own.

Don works well in both unsupervised and team settings. Recently his primary focus has been technical writing and documentation which he excels at. In addition to his technical skills, he was also able to effectively communicate technical issues to customers of varying technical backgrounds.

I recommend Don for employment, he works hard and would make an asset for any organization.

Sincerely,

Seiji Godo
